LEDC

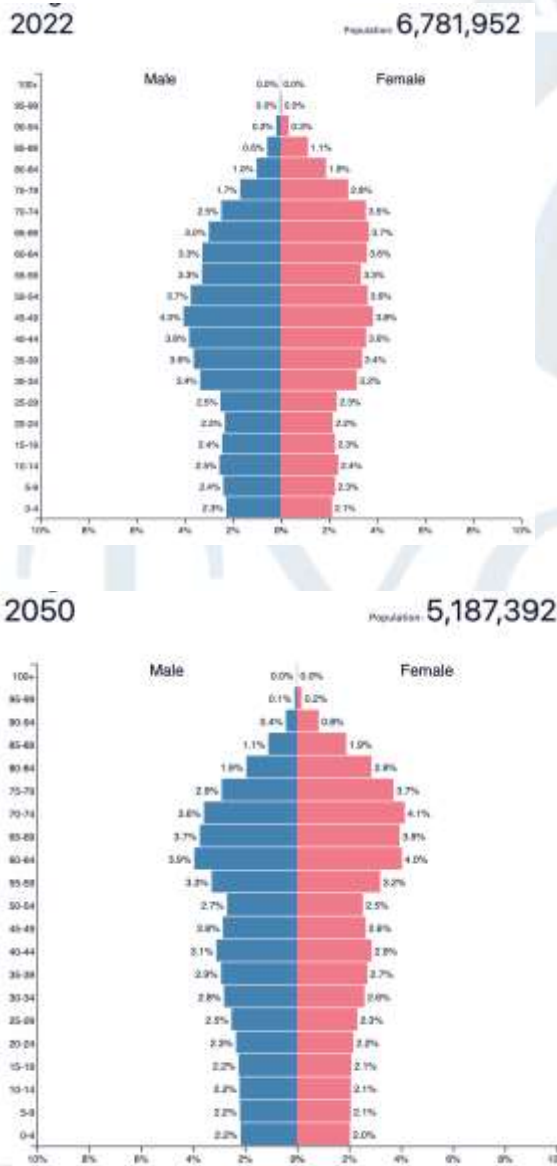

Question 1b (1 mark)

State one reason for the decline in GDP per capita in Afghanistan

One reason for the decline in GDP per capita in Afghanistan could be prolonged political instability and conflict. Afghanistan has been experiencing decades of war and internal conflicts, which have severely disrupted the country's economic development and hindered investments and business activities. The ongoing conflict has resulted in widespread destruction of infrastructure, reduced productivity, and significant displacement of the population. These factors contribute to the decline in GDP per capita as the country struggles to rebuild and create a stable economic environment.
